PREFACE.

A desire has been manifested by the descendants of the great astronomer to have the genealogy of his immediate family and connections printed in a separate volume for the benefit of all who feel a desire to acquaint themselves with the genealogy and history of David Rittenhouse, the greatest astronomer in his time. It is hoped that it may find favor and be appreciated by all to whose notice this little volume may come.

DAVID RITTENHOUSE[4], of MATTHIAS[3], of NICHOLAS[2], of WILLIAM[1].

Gen.	Individual No.	Family No.
5	4200	1	Elizabeth Rittenhouse, b. about 1767; m. Jonathan Dickinson Sergeant, Esq., of Philadelphia, at the close of the year 1788; it was his second marriage.

Mr Jonathan Dickinson Sergeant was an eminent lawyer in Philadelphia, and for some time Attorney General of Pennsylvania; he was one of the five persons delegated on the 20th of February, 1776, by the convention of New Jersey (where he then resided) to represent that colony in Congress. His colleagues were the late Governor Livingstone and John de Hart, Richard Smith and John Cooper, Esquires. Mr. Sergeant died with the yellow fever, in Philadelphia, on the 8th of October, 1793. He left a son and two daughters by this marriage. He was the first Attorney General of Pennsylvania.

Instead of leaving the city during the time of the yellow fever, 1793, he remained in the city, and was a leader of those who devoted their time and money to the establishment of hospitals for the relief of the sick. No doubt many lives were saved through his action, although he became a prey to the disease and died while engaged in the good cause. Their children were Esther, David and Frances.

Gen.	Individual No.	Family No.
5	4201	2	Esther Rittenhouse, b. about 1770; m. Nicholas Baker Waters, M. D., of Philadelphia, in 1790, a young physician of respectable talents and amiable disposition; he died of a pulmonary disease in August, 1794, at a very early age, leaving one son, who died young, on September 4, 1813, aged 22 years, named David Rittenhouse Waters.

David Rittenhouse named his second daughter Esther, in compliment to his sister, Mrs. Thomas Barton. In a letter to the Rev. Thomas Barton, written on the occasion of the birth of this younger child, he says: "To me it is a matter of indifference, but to my Eleanor it was a great disappointment, to have a girl, having promised herself a boy; and it had long since been resolved that this child, if a son, should be called Thomas, after yourself." The oldest daughter was named Elizabeth, after his own mother.

5	4202	3	There was one daughter by the second marriage, but she died quite young.

7	4206	1	Elizabeth Sergeant Barton, b. April 28, 1815; d. August 23, 1895; m. Samuel Abbot, of Boston, April 28, 1840; he was born October 10, 1807; d. October 4, 1873; children, Caroline, Elizabeth, George M., Elizabeth, Lewis, Charles, Fanny.
7	4207	2	Emma Barton, b. 1816; d. aged 5 years.
7	4208	3	Julia Barton, b. 1817; d. June 26, 1884; m. Dr. J. Dickinson Miller, U. S. Navy.

Dr. Miller was of distinguished ancestry. His grandfather, Rev. John Miller, a Presbyterian pastor, of Dover, Del., came from Boston, Mass. The latter's mother was a great-granddaughter of John Alden, one of the heroes of the Mayflower, and associated in New England history with the romantic story of Captain Miles Standish. On the maternal side Dr. Miller was no less distinguishedly connected. His mother was the daughter of Jonathan Dickinson Sergeant (if so, must be by second marriage), a member of the Continental Congress, and his great-grandmother was a daughter of Jonathan Dickinson, the first President of Princeton College.

ELEANOR RITTENHOUSE[4] (Evans), of MATTHIAS[3], of NICHOLAS[2], of WILLIAM[1].

5 4252 1 Benjamin Evans. In middle age he married the daughter of John Brown, of Chester county, Pa. This proved to be a happy union. He inherited a valuable farm from Mr. Brown and raised a family of four intelligent daughters; he died about 1837.

Daniel Evans, the husband of Eleanor Rittenhouse (No. 40, page 214, Vol. I, History of Rittenhouse Family), died suddenly, he having quitted the harvest field somewhat indisposed; retired to bed, and in a few minutes afterwards was found dead; he died about 1790.

5 4253 2 Matthias Evans, located in Pittsburg, was a successful builder; he died a few years prior to his brother, David, about 1834; unmarried.

5 4254 3 David Evans, m. Elizabeth Carson, of Philadelphia; at an early age he migrated to Pittsburg, Pa., which was then rising from an old frontier fort into a commer-

5	4255	4	Hannah Evans, m. Dr. William Smith, of Trappe, Montgomery county, Pa.; no issue.

In this family Eleanor Evans spent the latter part of her life, and died about 1809. She was the mother of Hannah Evans. In February, 1816, Mrs. Smith was taken down with typhus pleurisy; Miss Armstrong was called on to watch over the sick-bed. In a few days the doctor was prostrated, and next Miss Armstrong, all three dying within a space of two weeks.

5	4256	5	Elizabeth Evans, b. 1767; d. June 14, 1802, aged 35 years; m. Joseph Armstrong; had five sons and one daughter, three of whom died before the death of the mother (in 1802); the last born died in 1804, aged about three years.

In 1816 Eleanor, the only daughter, died, aged 22 years, leaving only one son, A. E. Armstrong, from whose manuscript I have the above information. This A. E. Armstrong married a Miss Baker, daughter of John Baker, of Lower Providence, Montgomery county, Pa., whose wife was a Miss Roberts, of Welsh extraction.

ESTHER RITTENHOUSE[4] (Barton, Rev. Thomas), of MATTHIAS[3], of NICHOLAS[2], of WILLIAM[1].

5 4261 1 William Barton, m. Elizabeth Rhea.

He was the oldest son of Rev. Thomas Barton, and was a man of solid ability and great energy of character. In September, 1775, at the suggestion of his father, he left America for England, bearing with him letters of recommendation from Bishop Peters and other persons. While in Europe he laid the foundation of his education, and otherwise advanced his literary interests, for which he had a peculiar fondness. He left England in 1778 and returned to America, by way of Holland and the West Indies, and landed at Baltimore January 8, 1779. On his passage from the West Indies to the Continent he assisted in making prize of a British privateer, which was brought to Baltimore. Immediately upon landing he took the oath of fidelity and allegiance to the United States Government. Upon his arrival at Lancaster he received a letter from David Rittenhouse, dated January 24, 1779, in which he says: "I most sincerely congratulate you on your safe arrival, and impatiently expect the pleasure of seeing you here. I received yours from Baltimore ten days after the date, and immediately wrote to your father, supposing him to be still in New York, though we cannot be certain as to that matter." He was shortly afterwards admitted to the Lancaster bar, and also chosen an officer of the militia of the borough of Lancaster. His advocacy of the cause of the struggling colonies was warm and enthusiastic. On the 18th of August, 1789, he was nominated by President Washington, one of the Judges of the Western Territory, and the Senate ratified the nomination. He was afterwards (with but two exceptions) unanimously recommended by the Lancaster bar for the appointment to the President Judgeship of the District, composed of the counties of Lancaster, Chester, York and Dauphin. In 1779 he was an ardent Republican and staunch advocate of the election of Thomas McKean for Governor of Pennsylvania. Being a finished scholar and a fine writer, he was, during that campaign, the one generally selected to draft the Democratic addresses, then a leading feature of political parties. He was, in 1800, appointed Prothonotary of Lancaster eounty, and this office, together with the commission of Clerk of the Orphans' Court, which he obtained in 1803, he held up to 1809, when he was succeeded by John Passmore. He afterwards removed to Philadelphia, and was chosen secretary of the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia. He obtained from the University of Pennsylvania the honorary title of Master of Arts. He is the author of a dissertation on the Freedom of Navigation and Maritime Commerce, and also of a biography of the philosopher, David Rittenhouse.

He has also written a work on the abolition of trial by jury, wherein he vigorously and ably opposed the proposition. On the fly-leaf is written: "To R. P. Barton. From his Brother, the Author."

The work is in the possession of Randolph Barton, who is a grandson of R. P. Barton, and is an attorney-at law at Baltimore, Md.

5	4262	2	Esther Barton, b. April 17, 1756; m. March 3, 1774, to Paul Zantzinger, of Lancaster, by Rev. Dr. Smith; he was a merchant in the borough of Lancaster, Pa.; he went to camp at Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Mr. Bryan writes, March 15, 1779, that Zantzinger has a design of getting liberty to pass into New York. For this purpose he will hold forth his desire to visit his father-in law, Rev. Thomas Barton, now in that city.

It is probable that he was accompanied by William Barton, who lately returned from England, and was a son of Rev. Thomas Barton.

John Paul Zantzinger, of Lancaster, was a merchant and an honorable, high-minded gentleman. They had sixteen children, and resided at Lancaster, Pa.; he was born 1744, and died June 23, 1817, aged 73 years.

Soon after the death of his parents he moved to the family of a brother in Philadelphia, in 1782, where he spent several years in the study of literature, the sciences, and medicine; in 1776 he went to Great Britain and prosecuted his medical studies at Edinburgh and London. He afterwards visited Gottingen, and there obtained the degree of Doctor of Medicine. On returning to Philadelphia, in 1789, he established himself as a physician in the city, and his superior talents and education soon procured him competent employment. He was that year appointed Professor of Natural History and Botany in the College of Philadelphia, and continued in that office on the incorporation of the college with the University, in 1791. He was appointed Professor of Materia Medica on the resignation of Dr. Griffith; and on the death of Dr. Rush, succeeded him in the department of the Theory and Practice of Medicine. He died December 19, 1816.

In 1803 he published "Elements of Botany, or Outlines of the Natural History of Vegetables, &c." Dr. Barton has the honor of being the first American who gave to his country an elementary work on botany.

He also published "Collections for an Essay Towards a Materia Medica of the United States."

In 1805 Dr. Barton commenced the publication of the "Medical and Physical Journal."

5	4264	4	Matthias Barton, b. 1762; d. January 11, 1809; m. Esther Cox, daughter of Tench Cox; had no issue.

He was a son of Rev. Thomas Barton. He was admitted to the bar in 1778, and was elected, from Lancaster county, to the Legislature in the years 1793, 1794 and 1795. In 1796 he was elected to the Senate of Pennsylvania, and re-elected in 1800. He was a man of superior culture and possessed a great fondness for natural history. He was a gentleman, very amiable in his manners, of unspotted, private virtue, and whose charms in society endeared him to all with whom he came in contact. He was a useful citizen, and ranked among the ablest men of Pennsylvania. He died January 11, 1809, in the 47th year of his age.

Judge White was the son of Major White, a merchant of Philadelphia, and a Revolutionary officer, whose mother was the daughter of Alexander Moore, of Bridgeton, N. J. His parents dying while he was an infant, he was reared by his grandparents, from whom he inherited a large estate in Bridgeton, N. J. He subsequently moved to Woodbury, N. J., in 1808, where he practiced law, and was appointed Attorney General of the state, in 1833, and Judge of the Supreme Court, in 1838. He was a tall, fine-looking man, and died in 1860, having lived to the age of 92 years.

His father, Major White, was an aid to General Sullivan, and was wounded at the battle of Germantown; he, however, followed with the retreating army, and died at a farm house on the Skippack road. He was buried with General Nash and others in the Mennonite burying-ground, at Kulpsville, Montgomery county, Pa., about twenty-five miles north of Philadelphia, where a monument has been erected to their memory. His handsome appearance and dress had conferred on him the soubriquet of "Beau White." His gold watch and sleeve buttons, decorated with blue enameled crest and monogram, are in the possession of a lady collaterally related.

5	4268	8	Richard Peters Barton, d. January, 1821; m. Martha Walker, daughter of Dr. Walker, of "Kingston," the name of the family mansion, in Dinwiddie county, Virginia.

He acquired property and moved to the Valley of Virginia, and settled about six miles south of Winchester, Virginia. He died January 10, 1821, the owner of a beautiful estate in that lovely country, to which he was probably attracted by its resemblance to Lancaster county, Pa. His sons were, Richard, Robert and David Walker.

WILLIAM BARTON[5], of ESTHER RITTENHOUSE[4] (Barton), of MATTHIAS[3], of NICHOLAS[2], of WILLIAM[1]. (See 4203.)

6	4269	1	John Rhea Barton, M. D., d. January 1, 1871; m. Miss Annie Frazer, and by her had two children; she died; he married a second time, to Susan Ridgway, a daughter of Jacob Ridgway, and widow of Dr. Rotch, of New Bedford. He was born at Lancaster, Pa.

He was a leading physician of Philadelphia, and graduated with distinction at the University of Pennsylvania, soon attaining a position as surgeon, and excelled in the treatment of difficult cases. His treatment of compound fractures of the leg by bran dressing is still followed in our large hospitals. His name has been associated with a peculiar fracture of the radius, involving the wrist joint, and with an ingenious bandage for dressing a broken jaw. He died at his residence, on South Broad street, Philadelphia, on January 1, 1871.

6	4270	2	William P. C. Barton, b. November 17, 1786; d February 29, 1856; m. Esther Rittenhouse Sergeant; d June 4, 1870. (See 4203.)

It is a well known fact that William P. C. Barton and each member of his class at Princeton took the name of some celebrated man. William P. C. Barton took that of Count Crillon. His cousin, John Rhea Smith (John R. C. Smith), took the name of Clarendon. They retained the initials of their college names to the end of their lives.

William P. C. Barton was born in Philadelphia, November 17, 1786, and graduated from Princeton College in 1805, and commenced the practice of medicine under the direction of his uncle, Dr. Benjamin Smith Barton, and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1808. The subject of his graduation thesis was "Nitrous Oxide Gas." It was deemed worthy of publication, and was for many years a standard treatise upon that subject.

Dr. William P. C. Barton practiced medicine in Philadelphia, and was surgeon at the Pennsylvania Hospital. Upon the recommendation of the celebrated Dr. Benjamin Rush and Dr. Physick, was appointed surgeon in the navy. He organized the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery U. S. Navy, and was appointed by the Secretary of the Navy the first Chief of the Bureau. He was Professor of Botany in the University of Pennsylvania, and Professor Materia Medica and Botany in Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. He was stationed several times at the navy yard at Philadelphia, and at other stations on shore; he also had a great deal of sea duty. He became Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia; a member of the American Philosophical Society; President of the Linnean Society; and honorary member and surgeon of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry.

As early as 1818 Dr. Willlam P. C. Barton endeavored to obtain a charter for a new medical college. This movement was opposed by the friends of the University of Pennsylvania, and the efforts of Dr. William P. C. Barton and his friends proved unsuccessful. Seven years later Dr. McClellan established the Jefferson Medical College, and Dr. William P. C. Barton was Professor of it for three years. Dr. William P. C. Barton married Esther, daughter of Jonathan Dickinson Sergeant, a member of the Philadelphia bar, and granddaughter of the celebrated David Rittenhouse. She died June 4, 1870.

In an address before the Alumni Association of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, at its first anniversary, March 11, 1871, by S. D. Gross, M D., LL. D., Professor of Surgery in the College, and President of the Association, Dr. Gross thus speaks of Dr. William P. C. Barton: "He was in all respects a remarkable man; highly educated, learned in his profession, a graceful lecturer, an able writer, and one of the most accomplished botanists in America. He abounded in flashes of wit, and a vein of irony and sarcasm was perceptible in almost everything he did and said. He had a passionate love for music and played with consummate ability upon the flute and violin. Many of his acts were marked by the eccentricities of genius. His style of lecturing was conversational, plain, simple and didactic, without any attempt at oratory; and his success as a teacher was all that could have been desired. In his appearance he was a model of neatness and elegance.

ESTHER BARTON[5] (Zantzinger), of ESTHER RITTENHOUSE[4] (Barton), of MATTHIAS[3], of NICHOLAS[2], of WILLIAM[1].

6 4278 1 Esther Maria Zantzinger, b. at Lancaster, December 9, 1774, at 10 o'clock in the morning; d. August 15, 1775; baptized by Rev. Mr. Helmuth.

6 4279 2 Thomas Barton Zantzinger, b. January 5, 1776, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon; was baptized by Rev. Mr. Helmuth; m. Miss Sheaf.

6 4280 3 Mary Zantzinger, b. March 15, 1777, between 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning; baptized by Rev. Mr. Helmuth; d. June 27, 1821.

She was married to Rev. Thomas Picton, of Gloucester county, New Jersey, November 18, 1802, by Rev. Mr. Edwards, of Salem, New Jersey. She left one daughter, Mary Barton Picton, born August 16, 1806, who married Mr. Edwin Stevens, of Hoboken, New Jersey.

6	4281	4	Sarah Barton Zantzinger, b. March 9, 1778, between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon; was baptized by Rev. Mr. Barton.

She married General Franklin Davenport, of Woodbury, New Jersey, who was considered Woodbury's first lawyer, Gloucester county's most noted citizen, and one of the most distinguished men in New Jersey. He served in the Revolutionary War, and particularly distinguished himself at Fort Mifflin. He had an extensive law practice, and was made first Surrogate of New Jersey, by General Livingston, in 1785, and was United States Senator from New Jersey, in 1798 and 1799. He served as Colonel of the New Jersey Troops in the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794, and was also a member of the famous "Fox Hunting Club" established prior to the Revolution. General Davenport lived to an advanced age, and died about 1820.

6	4282	5	Esther Sophia Zantzinger, b. May 15, 1779, at 6 o'clock in the morning; was baptized by Rev. Mr. Schultz; d. young.
6	4283	6	Julianna Elizabeth Zantzinger, b. August 26, 1781, between 6 and 7 o'clock in the afternoon; baptized by Rev. Mr. Muhlenberg; m. Colonel Robert G. Johnson, of Salem, New Jersey, November 17, 1813, by Rev. Nathaniel Todd, of Woodbury, N. J.; d., at Salem, August 13, 1854, and is buried by the side of her husband, in St. John's church-yard; she left no children.

Colonel Robert Gibbon Johnson was a prominent citizen of Salem, New Jersey, where his ancestors had been the first settlers. He graduated at Princeton College in 1790, but was frustrated in his cherished plan of studying law by the death of his father, and turned his attention to the care of his large landed estate. He was a man of great integrity of character, and when only 23 years of age was appointed one of the paymasters of the New Jersey Brigade in the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794. He was made Colonel of the militia cavalry in 1804, by Governor Williamson. Colonel Johnson possessed great culture, refinement and literary tastes, and drew around him the religious and literary minds of New Jersey, such as Bishop Croes, Dr. Staughton, Rev. Drs. Miller, Janeway, Ely, and Murray, of the Presbyterian Church; Chief Justice Kirkpatrick, Hon. Samuel Southard and others, who were his chosen friends and partakers of the hospitality of his handsome home. He was the principal founder of the First Presbyterian Church in his native town, the site of the church and grave-yard being his gift, a portion of his ancestral acres. He was one of the gentleman most instrumental in organizing the New Jersey Historical Society, in Trenton, in 1842, and was its first Vice President, and contributed many rare and original documents. He was also an historian, being the author of a "History of Salem, New Jersey," a standard work. Colonel Johnson lived to a ripe old age and died September, 1849, in his 80th year.

Mrs. Johnson was a lady of sterling character and fine appearance, and a kind and loving mother to her husband's children, who reverence her memory.
